Dear Peter:

I wanted to thank you for including Duckhorn Wine Company in WGS 2002. The event is impressive given the sheer number of chefs and hotel properties involved and each of the events in which I participated were well attended and very enjoyable. The concept of bringing wineries and chefs from around the world makes for an interesting event for the participants as well as the attendees.

Ted Durham and the Fullerton staff couldn't have been more gracious hosts. The hotel is a beautiful property and situated in an interesting area of Singapore. And, Rao kept me informed on all events - I'm not sure he ever slept. The phone lines were hot from all the emails back and forth.

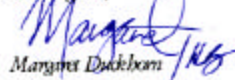

Some ideas for future WGS:

- Possibly a casual get-together for chefs and wineries early in the week to become better acquainted.
- Increase the Embassy in "clearing" the wines as the duty is quite high.
- Provide an email list of all participating chefs/wineries/hosting hotels to facilitate early communication on the wine/food pairing. It would have been nice to provide the chefs w/ wine samples to assist them in composing their menus.
- At events other than slated winemaker dinners where a winery's wines are poured, acknowledge the winery with the chef either verbally or on the menu.
- Make sure that all hosting hotels have appropriate, temperature controlled storage for the wines.
- An add-on might be a formalized wine seminar utilizing the visiting wineries wines.

I hope that you take the above as suggestions only, because the overall event was quite extraordinary and one that I could recommend other wineries' participation. I think your vision and goals for WGS are very admirable and you should feel proud of what you have accomplished in such a few short years.

Please feel free to visit us should your travels bring you to Napa Valley. I would love to reciprocate some of the Singaporean hospitality.

Best Regards,

Margaret Duckhorn
